FRIENDS OF THE
WATSON INSTITUTE

THE WATSON INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

at Brown University is a policy-oriented academic center that offers alternative insights on international affairs. The Institute produces cutting edge research by connecting political scientists, anthropologists, sociologists, and policymakers – across such critical fields as global development, environment, security, and related issues of culture and identity. Together, they seek new solutions to issues ranging from climate change to defense policy and beyond.

THE FRIENDS OF THE WATSON INSTITUTE

provides a vehicle through which Brown alumni and others can engage with the Institute, University, and each other through a shared interest in international affairs.

RECENT FOWI EVENTS

have included...

- screenings of Why We Fight, with award-winning director Eugene Jarecki
- the unveiling of Watson research on counter-terrorism
- a conversation with well-known Chinese democracy advocate Xu Wenli
- a preview of the film Virtual JFK: Vietnam, if Kennedy had Lived

JOIN US!

FOWI

is a vibrant group of distinguished individuals dedicated to international affairs. The program is chaired by Institute Overseer Lucinda B. Watson, daughter of the late Ambassador Thomas J. Watson, Jr., who founded the Institute to address contemporary global problems. FoWI members help shape the program and act as ambassadors for the Watson Institute and Brown University. This expanding network of Friends is central to achieving the Institute's goals across the globe.
